Curate's weekly reflection

This week, St Margaret's hosted the Churches Together meeting, and it was a moment I truly appreciated. I've always value the chance to gather with members of the Church of England, Methodist and Catholic Churches from Putney and Roehampton. These ecumenical gatherings are something I hold dear, as they reflect my deep commitment to Christian unity. In today's world, where division and conflict seem prevalent, it's more important than ever for churches to come together, not just in appearance but in genuine unity.

Ecumenicalism, for me, isn't just about shared services or symbolic gestures. It's about the actual joining of hearts and spirits, collaborating to promote the core teachings of Christ. As we face global challenges that often contradict the values Christ taught—compassion, forgiveness, justice—it becomes clear that standing together is not only beneficial but necessary. Our collective voice is louder and our impact stronger when we unite in faith.

I think there's something powerful in the reminder that we are all part of the same body of Christ. Despite differences in denomination or tradition, we are all called to love, serve, and support one another. These moments of togetherness affirm that, when we stand united in faith, we can better navigate the struggles of the world around us. It's a beautiful thing to witness and be a part of, and it reinforces my commitment to fostering Christian unity in every way I can.

If you would like to be involved in Churches Together initiatives then please do get in touch with either, myself, Clare Atkins or Hilary Belden

Have a fabulous week

Sarah
