Curates update

I'm writing this from Wychcroft, a retreat centre which is part of the Diocese of Southwark, it is peaceful, tranquil and a perfect place to reflect. The purpose of these couple of days is for the final year curates across the diocese to have some time to think about our 'next steps'. We began yesterday in our reflective practice groups, there are five in mine and we have met regularly throughout our curacy. We were asked to think about 'nests' and what nest are we currently in, some were about to fly and leave the nest having secured posts, another described a puffin trying to take flight, heavy and clumsy and another talked about a chicken run full of chaos and noise, whilst another snuggled under a duvet in the nest not wanting to leave, and after some thought I described myself as becoming a caretaker of my nest, waiting for a new person to arrive, getting it ready, keeping it feathered! I haven't applied for any jobs yet, but there are some coming up to advert in the next few months, so in the meantime I'm quite happy in the nest with all of you.
